I've just tied Adams this year from 20 through 12 and haven't had any issues with refusals for olives or Hnedricksons. Used to mostly use pinkish, tannish Hendricksons with a few red quills, but have't seen much of a difference. A few years ago tied only tan Sparkle duns and parachute Cahills for the later season, and didn't see much difference. I mostly first Lehigh Valley and Poconos so hit different sortds of water.

I think changing style of fly means more than color. Maybe a Catskill style, maybe a Sparkle dun, maybe a CDC fly etc.

I like to start with a 12 for Hendricksons. I'm of the camp start large and go down if you are not catching any.
