I treat other fishermen like they have leprosy. If they get close I move on. If I see another fisherman, I work around them as if I were deer hunting not to disturb them. I have a hard time in Pulaski, NY and during the first couple of days of trout season in PA. If I get into a situation with another fisherman where they are on top of me out of nowhere I let my body language do the talking. If they don't get the hint I move. Although it pains me to be the bigger man, I refrain from tying on a streamer and trying to cross lines. It's embarrassing to say, but my younger self would have been confrontational. Deep breaths, and a swig of Crown Royal help me enjoy the time on the water. The majority of these freezer packers will be gone in a few weeks.
