

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Segloch Run

Re: Segloch Run

Author: : The_Sasquatch

Date: : 2013/4/17 9:34:27

URL:

So many freaking chubs in that stream....at least they don't seem to rise to dries.

If you're going to make the trek to Northern Lanc for fishing, I too would recommend Hammer. Anywhere upstream of Speedwell Forge Rd is good. Right now you have the truck chasers out there, but if you walk upstream, you quickly lose all that silliness.

I talked to a few of them over the past week. One guy was a spinner guy w/ UL gear. I chatted w/ him. I asked if he had any luck. He said he caught a few natives but nothing big. I told him that was alright, the natives were what I was after! I asked if he caught any brownies, as this was my first day on the stream this year and I was interested in the brown population. He said, "I Don't think so. Just native rainbows..."

Saturday I fished one of the tribs. I walked down tot he Pumping Station Rd hole just to look around. One guy was out with his family. Nice kids, having fun catchin' stocked bows and suckers on worms. I had to laugh, every time one of the kids caught one, the daughters w/ him would go CRAZY! I talked to the dad a bit. He said his daughter caught one small brookie. He didn't understand why the state would stock such small fish. I explained to him that the state only stocks rainbows, so if he caught a brookie, it was a native, stream born trout. He had no idea the stream could support a native population. He thought it warmed up too much in the summer. Nice guy. Seemed to really be interested in native fish and cared that they could actually thrive in that creek.