I used to fish both Segloch and Hammer when I lived in the area. Depending on the time of year and recent rainfall they both can be fun. Hammer has a bit more casting room compared to Segloch if I remember correctly. I caught alot of brookies in both streams, some really pretty ones. On Segloch I do remember the deeper pools were very few and far between and fish were ultra spooky. There is also a little tributary that dumps into Hammer and it holds fish when there have been rains, but I think the fish tend to move down into Hammer during the drier months.
