I guess the obvious question is, if nuclear is so safe, why have we built a new plant in almost 40yrs?

Because reality and perception aren't always the same thing.

Also, our current plants are 1st generation plants, well past their designed lifetimes. Far less safe, and create far more waste, as well as that waste being far more dangerous, than modern designs would do. But we don't build modern plants to replace them, because, uhh, we're worried about waste and danger?
