I always said that the grannoms were a snowstorm of a hatch but that came literally today. Snowed off and on from 7:30-1 today. Saw some grannoms but we're probably yesterday's bugs. I Saw. maybe 3-4 rises but some were probably Chubs.

I tied on 2 partridge and peacock and never changed flies. Landed 4 and missed at least a dozen. Most strikes were when I hung them in the current for a while after they swung. Flies were a max of 1" under the surface on all strikes. Fish became very active at any sight of sunlight. They turned on the switch and started to take.

Caught and saw some real dink rainbows there. Like 7". I've seen a few here and there over the years but it seemed there were a lot that size in the stream.
