It has been my experience that anglers have nearly always underrated the fish population based on their catches, but electrofishing has told a different story. This is why you can't tell what and what isn't a Class A population with a "whippy-stick."

I remember in '03 when you did the last survey of the WB Perkiomen how many fish were found and I said, "Wow, that's a lot more then the 6 or 7 browns I usually catch there," this after shocking over 700 trout in the 300m section.
