

---

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Value of C & R

Re: Value of C & R

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2013/4/22 16:13:37

URL:

I'm sure I quite often catch the same fish over. I've mostly noticed it after looking closely at pictures. And since, at best, I take a picture on 1/4 fish I've caught, I'm sure it happens a lot more than I know.

Back in my baitfishing days, I had a similar experience in catching a fish that had been hooked, by my dad, the day before. It was on Oil Creek, and we fished the same place 2 days in a row. I tied my own minnow rigs and supplied his, single hook up front and single in the rear, fly hooks (hook eye bent forward, not back), and yellow thread. On day 1 he hooked a largish fish on said rig and broke it off. On day 2, same spot, I landed an 18 inch bow with one of my minnow rigs in it's mouth...

On a local brookie stream I also had repeated run-ins with a unique fish. He had only 3 red spots on one side, in a line. I fished the stream only once per year, and caught him from the same hole 3 years straight.