I have yet to use an Orvis sling pack I picked up at the outlet in Lancaster with my coupon from the ff show. Planning to use it for smallmouth. It does seem to be comfortable and sit nice on my shoulder. I think I'll like it and may eventually transition it to trout fishing. My problem is when I need to pack a rain jacket, something to eat and maybe even a hat and gloves in cold weather. Not always fishing close to the car. I'm still using a fishpond vest that I like but it doesn't have enough room for cargo in the back when I need it. What do you guys with chest packs do when you have an in between day where you may need to shed some clothes or carry a rain jacket? I have an older Willie J chest pack I've used for steelhead but because it's usually cold I'm already wearing jacket, gloves, etc.
