Using the buddy system can also save a life. I kinda leave this one for rivers that I am unfamiliar with. That in itself is where the danger lies. I become more at ease in my own waterways then when I go elsewhere. Statitics tell us that the majority of accidents happen near home. My fly line gets wrapped around my waterbottle, or net, or stringer - so I tend to leave them at home. I guess when I look at a staff, I have the same thoughts of something else to get caught up with my flyline. My age is a deck of cards (52) so I think I should probably invest and carry a staff as well as a good sharp knife.
