McSneek,

Those were fun days! I did end up questioning the value in some of those projects from a stream improvement perspective. Those freestoners flood way too much for some of the dinky changes we made. I do remember the tremendous mayfly and caddis nymphos coating the pine needles! Then they took the bulldozers in and really changed it. If anything I guess I just think the best and most practical thing to do is to restore riparian buffers as much possible.

I may have fished that meadow stretch a couple times since then but don't think I caught a fish. I may try to check it out in the next couple weeks.
