Pittflyguy,

There was a recent thread in the PAFF General Forum about the 2013 cicada brood with some embedded links. I bumped it to the top for you, it was buried in the second page. It's entitled "cicadas 2013". I remember from the last emergence some areas definitely are more intense in the amount of bugs. I don't think they are related to any particular stream or river because they are totally terrestrial insects. I'm just hoping for some heavy hatches near some of my favorite WW beats for smallies and carp.
