I hope to one day be as elite as you guys :)

not. . .

grow up

I have caught wild fish on bubble gum and have had more wild fish stike my indicator than stockies so please just put this to rest. No need to degrade people because of your elite preferences. As to answer Pennys question, I do enjoy fishing for the big stockies the ones that peel the drag after they've been in for a while. But I also love to explore the wilderness streams just thinking what kind of fish could hold in the run or hole. I'd say I'll take a 10+" wild over a 16" stockie but it would take a 14" wild to rival a 20+" stocked trout's fight.

And I do agree Penny wild fish taste better but I've only ever kept one which I accidentally killed.
