Good advice so far. Your tippet is only as strong as the knots you tie with it, so do some research then use which knots are strongest. After every fish you catch run your fingers over the tippet and visually inspect it for nicks or abrasions. Admittedly I often get lazy and don't inspect the tippet often enough, but if you find any weak spots you need to replace your tippet before fishing again, unless you want to lose the next fish you hook.
