Headed for the Lackawanna River this afternoon, about 1:00, with my brother Pete and friend Dan. Thought we'd give the weather time to warm up. Air temp around 70, water temp?

We saw a few bugs coming off from time to time, but only a couple of sporadic rises. Greg, from A & G Outfitters was sitting on the bench by the shop and told us that there had been some short morning hatches during the week, but otherwise, not much activity on the surface.

We were switching back and forth with patterns, surface, nymphs and wets. I wound up missing one on my mini-bugger pattern and Pete had two on but lost both. Dan got a rock. 😊

We may not have caught fish, but we had a good afternoon on the water and left the river with smiles on our faces.
