I fish for relaxation. Sure I like to catch fish, prefer it to not catching. I'm new enough at this game to find stocked and wild trout equally challenging.

I've been out with my friend Dan, (who is more experienced than I) and have caught fish when he didn't (Both wild and stocked streams). And there have been plenty of times where I handled netting his fish while never setting the hook on one of my own. Seems to me that stocked trout wise up pretty quickly.

Are the fish of either variety able to tell who's on the other end of the line? Sure doesn't seem like it to me.

Enjoy your time on the water, fishing the way and for the fish you prefer. Don't waste time looking down your nose at people who don't share your viewpoint.
