fellows: this site is well above tyrone, close to altoona. This area does not have the benefit of the prolific cold water springs and cold water tribs that makes the J an outstanding fishery.

Ongoing efforts to:

1. get the altoona water plant to reduce phosphorous and other discharges (completed last year)
2. working with the altoona water authority to have cold water release from its reservoirs
3. stream bank restoration in these areas to reduce silt (inhibits mayfly proliferation)

... will greatly improve this section. If you are interested, join and participate. A restoration project is coming up in July and new efforts to improve upstream trout spawning grounds is in the planning stage. You see there is still much work to be done.

PS: this area is actually far upstream from the estimate site of the macro and fish kills
