Geebee, I've never heard of it happening, but if you read just about any aerosol can you'll notice a part that mentions it's a violation of federal law to use that product in a way it's not intended to be used. It would really suck to just be trying to protect yourself and end up getting charged. And the way things are going today, logic isn't law enforcement's strongest point. At the very least, you could end up on the wrong side of a civil lawsuit.
