

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Who do you think is in the wrong?

Re: Who do you think is in the wrong?

Author: : wsender

Date: : 2013/4/29 13:17:02

URL:

Quote:

pcray1231 wrote:

It's probable that your friend was in the wrong. It appears to be the case.

However, I too would have taken that wording that wsender gave to mean "at the time of purchase". i.e. the friend was a bona fide PA resident when he bought his license. i.e. the license was bought legally and says it's good to fish in PA waters until XX date, which I'd take at it's word. After moving out of state, and changing his permanent residence, he would have to purchase a non-resident license the NEXT TIME he renews, but not until then.

So I guess my view is wrong, and that's a lesson learned for me, should I or any of my friends ever be in this position. Thanks for posting.

Given what is posted on the site it would seem that a resident license is valid until it expires, it's taken away from you (legal reasons), or until you're no longer a resident.