

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Who do you think is in the wrong?

Re: Who do you think is in the wrong?

Author: : JackM

Date: : 2013/4/29 19:02:58

URL:

The WCO could have been more understanding, that is true. What exactly is the big deal? He bought a license legally, I presume, that is, when he was a Pennsylvania domicile. Now, if, on the other hand, he was already gone when he tried to sneak a PA-resident license, he deserved everything he got. Otherwise, the WCO could have understood his misunderstanding of the law and offered him some accomodation beyond the full-fledged fine for being a non-resident. They teach a concept in law school known as "prosecutorial discretion." This would have been a prime opportunity to excercise some of that.