I dont quite get what I'm reading here.

10, 11, even 12 inch native brookies arent that rare, or are only "pretty rare".....

Any native brookie over 10 inches is in the "under one percentile" and is an astounding catch.

Fishing creek stands apart from other waters as far as native sizes go, and Big Spring simply stands alone. I love them both but I certainly dont want to fish them every day. Outside of those two streams I think I'm at 3? natives over 10 inches. With them im at somewhere just under 20. Thats for my life and thousands of natives caught on streams I couldnt begin to compile a list of.

You bet they're rare, rare as hell.
