There was a time in my life when I moved around a lot. Once got pulled over for speeding on I-80 in the middle of PA. At the time I had a Connecticut Drivers license and a New Jersey license plate, and if he would have checked, I had a PA address on my insurance card.

Truck was full of luggage and I was headed to Connecticut to close on a house I had just sold.

"Who's truck is this?" I told him I leased it in NJ, which wasn't a lie.

I only got a verbal warning. Either I have a very honest face, or he didn't want to take the time to figure all that out.

5 miles down the road he was set up with his radar on again, but that time I was going exactly the speed limit.

I would have assumed that if he bought the license when he was still a resident, then it should be good for the whole year.

What would I have done? Parked my vehicle at your house and made you drive.
