

Subject: : Hatch and Entomology Forum

Topic: : Stonefly Nymphs

Re: Stonefly Nymphs

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2013/4/30 15:16:01

URL:

Yeah, good close up shots would likely be required to narrow to the exact species, and even then it's tough. But I think we've got it narrowed down to the genus. You have a bunch of golden stonefly nymphs there, at least 2 different species. Plus one mayfly nymph.

Philly, there are some species of mayfly with 3 tails at the nymph stage, and only 2 in duns and spinners. That said, this one's a clinger, and certainly could be a March Brown.