

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Who do you think is in the wrong?

Re: Who do you think is in the wrong?

Author: : jdaddy

Date: : 2013/4/30 22:45:51

URL:

I am glad the WCO did his job and issued the ticket and subsequent fine. The guy knew perfectly well that he was not a resident of PA, so why would he remotely assume that he could use a resident license? This concept of "dumb, dumb didn't know better" or "hot blondes should not get speeding tickets" is a bastardization of law. I got pulled over in Centre county last week doing 86 in a 55. Guy didn't write me a ticket. Why the hell pull me over? You know I am going to do it again. Hell, I did it 5 minutes later. It's absurd. Break the law, pay the penalty imo.

Complain, complain, complain about the lack of funding for PFBC and then get pissed when someone gets a ticket and generates some revenue? Breaking the licensing law is a lesser offense than harvesting some stupid stocked trout out of season? Seems like yet again people are concerned with what fits their needs best.

timmyt, your disrespect of law enforcement and name calling is pathetic.