I'm not sure my experience lines up w/ the statement about large brookies taking dries. I've not broke through that 10" range until last night, but I have hit the 9-10" mark many times and I'd say half of them were on dries. It could be the water that I catch the larger brookies in though. It's a bigger free stoner w/ a limestone influence at its headwaters. It doesn't really resemble your typical brookie stream.
