a 2handed rod is going to give you a lot of trouble... you are better off buying cheap single hand than struggling.

- stripping in the head, it is an extremely PITA to get it back out the rod for the next cast. 36' or 27' head will still put the fly 45'+ (min) from your feet when you are ready to cast.

- spey casting a backwards head won't work... you need you wt at the top of the d-loop to power everything... not sitting on the water.

yes people have messed with the surf rods... but that really only gives you an advantage in a boat.

a properly paired single hand setup with good tech is a much better tool
