thanks paco, i suck... yeah exactly what i'm talking about with the outbound line! though a skagit caster would give him hell n tell him to keep his upper hand still, but that is such a hard habit to break! believe me i know...

i was thinking maybe getting ahold of steve godshall and seeing if he could build a skagit head(22-25') integrated into a switch line vs the loop to loop connection.

Call Tightlines Fly Shop in NJ and ask for James he will be able to assist you in everything you would need in regards to two handed rods and lines . I bought a 8/9 Beulah Surf rod with line from them last year and their customer service was second to none .
