His arms are out stretched to the camera, so the angle & lens perspective makes fish looks larger than it really WAS ... not is ... because he killed it. But it's still WAS a nice fish.

If it were me, I'd tell him that a photo of the fish on the creek bank next to his rod (before he released it) would have given a more accurate measure of the fish - and that thanks to him it's dead and so now there once-were fish like that in the creek to breed.

Sorry, that's just the way I see it.
