

---

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Who do you think is in the wrong?

Re: Who do you think is in the wrong?

Author: : FarmerDave

Date: : 2013/5/3 7:26:53

URL:

Quote:

Gone4Day wrote:

I don't know if this applies, but from the PFBC FAQ:

In order to legally use a ... resident ... fishing license, you must be a bona fide resident (...) of Pennsylvania not just at the time you purchased the license, but also at the time you go fishing in Pennsylvania.

Now that is interesting. But I doubt an FAQ section would stand up in court unless it favors the defendant. If it were actually written in the regulation, then it would stand.

I'm not a lawyer, but have been involved in enough contracts to know that if there is something ambiguous in a contract, it usually goes against the party that drew it up. The same applies to laws.

So far, I'm still with Jack on this one. It is a beatable offense IMO because it is not black and white. That that is coming from a guy who once beat a ticket for following a marked police car too closely.

What can I say, the prick cut me off. 😊

All that said, I'd probably still just pay the fine. It ain't like it is going to increase your insurance cost or something.

But Marvin, I would have done the same exact thing as your buddy, only I would have done a better job of avoiding the man. 😊