That's a good idea with the sharpie, would give me the ability to choose between a lot of different colors and use different colors on the same fly without changing thread... but i feel like it would take a long time to color and let dry so it doesn't come off on other material when tying. Since thread is only a few bucks and I really only need a few colors I'm okay with buying colored thread, at least for now. But I'll keep that secret in mind when I get into tying a lot of different flies
