

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Dry Fly Tying thread?

Re: Dry Fly Tying thread?

Author: : ryguyfi

Date: : 2013/5/3 12:08:27

URL:

Here's also a little secret.... size 12-16 is actually quite large when it comes to flies. Wait till you start tying sz 26-32 midges!

The thread can also impact the actual color of the flies when they're wet. I use an amber thread and a lighter dubbing on my sulphurs. When it's wet, the color of the thread bleeds through the dubbing and makes it darker. Not to get too technical with you, but color can make a difference on your thread.

When tying you should break your thread every once in a while. You want tension on it. So minus the bad words when it happens, don't worry too much about it. It happens to all of us.

Practice makes perfect (actually PERFECT practice makes perfect, but keep working on it)