Thanks for the input guys.

I've been to the streams loaded with bluegills and other panfish and feel like the basics are adequate enough to catch trout, I think it's my drift and roll cast that's doing me in. Need to work on my fly depth and placement of splits and indicator.

Was at the LL Tuesday and had a nice hook up with a goofy wooly bugger I tied. (Tied it because I thought it looked cool and wasn't expecting it to work) I lost the fish due to my clinch not coming undone. Needless to say my knots are inadequate or I'm being lazy. Probably the latter.

My point is all these "little" things that need work, turn my fishing trip into a big goose egg.

Gonna focus on the little things tonight and see if I can right this ship.

Thanks again for the input.
