I was at Big Spring one evening last fall. It right at dusk, cold and breezy. I didn't even have a fishing rod with me, just dropped in to visit the fish. Saw a big caddis dancing over the water, dipping to lay eggs. It made a big buzzing fuss whenever it touched down. I said to myself, "that's what I call living dangerously".

A few seconds later, caddis hits the water again, fluttering in place right next to an undercut on the far side of the Ditch...boo-yow. The End.
