

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : More cicadas

Re: More cicadas

Author: : FrequentTyer

Date: : 2013/5/6 21:28:52

URL:

Thanks for the additional comments guys. The hook gape point is a really good one and I will adjust as suggested.

Ed, don't you know that foam is a gateway material. If I give in to that temptation it is just a matter of time before I'm using centipede legs and gluing on doll eyes :)

I'm kidding of course. Gutcutter's flies are very nice and I'm sure quite productive. I just don't like to use synthetics in trout flies for no reason other than I enjoy the challenge. I do use foam and all sorts of plastic bits in warm water patterns like my bluegill cricket (which is not really supposed to mimic a cricket). I seriously considered resizing the cricket into a cicada, but decided that the deer hair would be more fun. Now I need to find some orange and red deer hair...

Mike.