The app is designed to work on both Android tablets and phones but I haven't installed it on a Nexus myself so I'll tentatively say yes!

You should be able to install and use it on both devices simultaneously as a matter of fact. You can do that now with the existing app.

Unfortunately, there are so many manufacturers of Android out there, each with their own little customizations that I can't possibly test every device so I don't make promises.

One phone version from HTC for instance had a custom app built into the phone by the manufacturer called Footprints that usurped the navigation function of other apps. You had to uninstall Footprints which is a PIA with built in apps to make the navigation work. That is the challenge in Android development. Manufacturers are free to tweak the Android to their preference whereas Apple is all about consistency.
