pcray, I think you're mistaken about the nature of the list you linked....looks to me that that is simply a compiled list of streams that flow on public land; thru State Forests, Parks, SGL's, etc....and even at that, it is incomplete since there's nothing listed to cover the area around the Cumberland Valley.

The Page 6 fine print:

"NOTE: The waterways identified herein as having publicly-owned streambeds have been compiled by the Commonwealth over time from various sources. Identification is based upon information believed to be reliable and persuasive evidence of such ownership. The identification of a waterway as having a publicly-owned streambeds herein is not intended to be a final determination that the waterway is navigable under state or federal law. Moreover, other waterways not identified herein may be navigable under state or federal law, in which case their streambeds would also be publicly-owned. The Commonwealth reserves the right to add or remove waterways identified as having publicly-owned streambeds as additional information becomes available."
