I was up in that exact exact location two Saturdays ago in the pm. There were definitely fish there as my dad and I both had some hits under on WBs. Later in the afternoon is when things got exciting.

The caddis hatch started, a little green #18 with a green body. Though no fish were rising I decided to see what I could make happen. I through an EH caddis from some ripples into some slower water in a spot no more that 10 ' across and started getting rises. It was great, but a bit confusing. I landed 4 trout in the hour that I saw caddis on the water. The weird part was that there was nothing rising except to my fly. I guess that live bugs were just not staying still long enough.

It was a fun night and I would definitely hit those waters again. We normally spend most of our time below the FEW, but we were getting nothing with the quick water.
