Tom, you are incorrect. This list is compiled from 3 separate lists.

1. Public highway list
2. Army Corps of Engineers list of navigable waters
3. Oberdorfer's List (compiled from research of commerce combined with court decisions)

But you were correct in pointing out the fine print. It is not a final determination of navigability. Focus on "final", not "navigability". The DCNR's position, if you want to call it that, is indeed that these waters are navigable, not merely that they have public streambeds. The disclaimer's purpose is to acknowledge that the DCNR does not have the FINAL say in the matter, only a court does. i.e. another entity could also claim ownership, and a court would have to decide who is right.
