

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : super agressive trout feeding?

Re: super agressive trout feeding?

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2013/5/10 10:55:15

URL:

Yeah, caddis move fast. Fish chase emergers right out out of the water. And the egg-laying adults skitter fast across the surface. If a fish doesn't get there quick, it misses. Caddis hatches are famous for splashy rises and occasional "jumps". It's also a heck of a time to "skitter" a high floatin imitation around, and some of the takes can be spectacular, water clearing and flipping over in mid-air type, leaps.

I think you're very much overplaying the energy efficiency thing. I mean, it's true, to a point. But trout can be VERY aggressive at times. It's only when the meal is large enough to be worth it, and when it's necessary to catch said prey.