Saw behavior similar to this yesterday, while fishing with my brother. (See the Another Good Day post)

When I retrieved my wooly bugger to check the hook after hanging up, I would have it skimming the surface while lifting the rod to bring it within reach. There were a number of times when a fish would swirl at it. (No, I didn't hook any of them) This was in very murky water, so I'm not sure of how far they may have followed the fly.

Just one more aspect of a good day on the water.
