Thanks Semperfish; that's all I needed to know. The specific stream was not important to me. A number of tidal sections of tribs from the Delaware state line up to Trenton Falls are likely to support substantial numbers of these fish this year. Finding them in the non-tidal segments of these streams would have been very interesting, although it is also interesting that these fish have shown up already in Bucks Co tribs. We were not seeing many from these year classes while electrofishing the main tidal river last week from Marcus Hook to Tacony-Palmyra Bridge, but more and more adults are moving into the shallows and spawning has already been completed by a relatively small percentage of the females. Others are not even close to being ready.
