Yeah, the weekend looks good, at least Saturday. More concern about Wed./Thurs. for me. I'll be up there early. And weather those days will set up the stream conditions for the weekend.

Last weekends rains weren't quite as bad as feared. Nonetheless, they got some rain. Streams look to be in ok shape but it wouldn't take a whole lot to put em off.

Today and tomorrow clear. Wed-Fri look like scattered thunderstorms. Wed. looking the worst/most likely. They will be of the scattered type, though, where it's likely somewhere gets POUNDED and somewhere fairly nearby gets very little if any. Exact placing is virtually impossible to predict, it's just where those cells set up. So about all you can do is take a wait and see approach, play it by ear. For the weekend, some streams could be in prime shape while others are blown out. Don't set your fishing plans in stone.

That said, it's late May. This is normal. If, 4 months ago, you'd have given this scenario to me I'd take it in a heartbeat! Playing it by ear is part of fishing....
