What did you just stay at Holiday Inn Express or something? 😊 While you're engaging in everyone's favorite practice of armchair lawyering remember you're basing it on hearsay. Speaking simply as one guy to another, I completely get what you're saying but I also get where this gracious landowner is coming from too, he just wants people to enjoy his land without burning it down or littering every square inch. He's trying not to be a hardass but you're right that in doing so like that he's opening himself up to at least a certain degree of liability. It just struck me as a little sad that from the entire content of the story that's what you fixed on.
