

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : Good news or nut case?

Re: Good news or nut case?

Author: : BeastBrown

Date: : 2013/5/15 16:55:50

URL:

Believe it or not, this gentleman is most likely a flame for moths. He is controlled opposition. I have read and watched a decent amount of him. He once made an unequivocal claim that there are only good extraterrestrials-very bold indeed. Huge red flag. You know what they say about dealing in absolutes. Many other claims he has made and supported that cause great doubt.

Other so called conspiracy forums are actually run by big oil and gas. Private domain who is now, but they weren't always so careful in the beginning of the net. Big energy controls your thought process.

As for the "free energy", well, it is blatantly obvious that nuclear power is and was stifled by American gas and oil men. All you have to do is look at the world's billionaires list to see how relatively easy it is to buy acreage and extort your fellow Americans when the mercury plummets.

The direction that nuclear energy research has gone in is very telling. It is the closest thing we have to free energy that the Euro-inbred banking cartel will not kill people for.

Those naval ships we have that don't need to be refueled for quite some time.....yeah.....not running around the world on nat gas.