90% of the time I nymph. Dries really only make sense in very limited situations, so don't get discouraged. Fishing dries is fun, but can be infuriating.

First, you might want to build some confidence on brook trout water. They'll rise to just about anything.

Second, really big hatches can be tricky. If you were on very glassy water and the fish had lots of options odds are your fly wasn't particularly appealing. Finding a fish that is feeding in moving water can be easier. The longer they have to inspect it the less likely they'll take it.
