Flyboy, I've stayed at the cross fork motel. The room was clean and nice. There are a lot of cool old appliances, handmade bunk beds, and some other kind of "unique" stuff about the rooms. You feel like you're staying at someone's old hunting camp, which i really enjoyed.

The only downside was that it took us maybe half an hour or more to find the owner who had the keys to our room. He was a really nice guy, but he had us scared that after a long drive through a rainy night we wouldn't have a dry place to lay our heads. I could have done without that part.
