I don't know about in lakes.

But in the larger streams I fish, it's pretty much a given that most of the fish will be rising on the opposite side of where I happen to be. And I have to try to figure out a way to cross over to reach them. And often I can't I'll tell you what else is a given... The distance one can cast and the depth of the water inching closer and closer to go'n over top of ones waders.
