The fish in falling springs don't usually show themselves too often. My success there or should I say successful outings have been determined by the following:

- 1) fishing the bridges from the upstream side, drifting the fly down (usually a dual rigged dry set up or streamer)
- 2) fishing the open water by fishing up stream and dropping streamers along the cut banks made of cress / grass / improvements.
- 3) going slower than slow! Wearing green, brown or light blue clothes and never anything bright.
- 4) big fish lay where you least suspect them to be. Usually right off the bank and at my feet. Flipping a streamer and going slow really improves my chances of connecting with one.

Be prepared to have a heart attack or immediate depression if you follow the above steps.

I bring 2 rods, and 8 weight for flipping streamers or a 3 wt for the finesse fishing.
