In all honesty depending on what section of river you are fishing depends on the hatch and intensity of the hatch. It is a very complex system and only putting your time in and get experience there will help you understand what is going on. I know it doesn't sound like much help but it is very hard for someone to give a report there because what happens yesterday there isn't what is going to happen tomorrow. With that being said I would have these flies at a minimum and carry a good selection of sizes of each.

March brown

grey fox

sulphurs

bwo

caddis

rusty spinners

hendricksons

standard nymph patterns
