

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Fish Travel

Re: Fish Travel

Author: : SBecker

Date: : 2013/5/21 21:54:09

URL:

Quote:

Fishidiot wrote:

This is not an unusual story. It's been common knowledge for some years that some stocked trout will go miles downstream.

I don't know of any theories that explain this.

It would certainly be possible for a fish from the LL to wind up in the WB. After all, shad cover the river on an annual basis. A fish moving from the LL down to the Del river would certainly be inclined to migrate upstream as the lower river warms. I'd think, though, it would be much more likely to move up a cold trib rather than continuing to move up the main stem of a warm river.

Who knows?

Big Lehigh in Bowmanstown.